Course Description

Effective delivery of construction projects hinges on two essential skills: precise cost estimation and proficient site management. In the competitive construction industry today, there is a significant demand for entry-level diploma and degree graduates in civil engineering. These graduates are needed to prepare Bills of Quantities (BOQs), tenders, estimates, and to support site execution, manage inventory, and ensure quality.

This sandwich course provides participants with the technical, practical, and analytical skills necessary for seamless on-site operations. Through hands-on exercises, case studies, and industry best practices, attendees will become familiar with software tools such as Excel, BIM applications, Revit, ERP to enhance efficiency.
